Oriental Essays A.J Arberry,2013-10-11 In this book Professor Arberry describes the lives and labours of six great scholars - Simon Ockley, Sir William Jones, E. W. Lane, E. H. Palmer, E.G. Browne and R. A Nicholson - men who were devoted to building a bridge between the peoples of Europe and Asia. To these biographical essays, Arberry has appended a fragment of candid autobiography and an eloquent plea for the further encouragement of Oriental studies.

Linguistic and Oriental Essays Robert Needham Cust,2016-07-15 Excerpt from Linguistic and Oriental Essays: Written From the Year 1840 to 1903 A feeling of wonder. Not unmixed with shame, overpowers me. The soldier who kills hundreds in battle, at least does not keep their bodies and record their names to amuse future generations; the sportsman, who Slaughters thousands of little birds, or little fish, merely to pass the time, at least does not bottle their bodies, and vex the next generation with their exhibition in pictures, as dry bones, or as stuffed animals. Should not the author follow their example? The one solitary new idea, which may be found in this Volume, is scarcely worth the mass of concomitant verbiage of rubbish. My only excuse is, that I indulged my genius, and must cry Peccavi. I can assure my Readers that it was by an entire accident that this Volume has seen the light, and at the age of 82 it was no joke to get it through the Press. I wished to bid Farewell to my Missionary Labours; this led to Essay II, and my having been present at Three Coronations in Westminster Abbey made. The compiling of Essay VII a matter of necessity. The reprint of two small Volumes was suggested for the purpose of saving their lives by being incorporated in a long serial, which can be found in so many Libraries of Europe, Asia, and America; and some of the Essays in the Table of Contents of this Series are the outcome of senile gratitude to that kind Power, which has lengthened my life, while Bishops, and Statesmen, and Warriors, have fallen at a younger age, and prolonging the use of my faculties beyond the normal age of man. That I did try to justify my prolonged existence, is evidenced by my attendance to the very last year of my life at my eighteen Committees for Benevolent, Religious, and Municipal purposes, and putting forth these Volumes, not for profit, but for the purpose of ventilating my own ideas and recording my own experiences. Oriental Responses to the West Nasrin Rahimieh,1990 Modern writers and scholars from the Islamic East have represented actual or fictional encounters with the West in a surprising variety of ways. Far from constituting a mono-lithic approach to the West, as Western Orientalism often tended to, these writings reveal an interest in and sometimes acute perception of cross-cultural conflict and synthesis. The very difficulties experienced by writers and critics immersed in two or more cultures have led to new creative and innovative forms of response to the West. By shifting focus in East-West relations towards the East, it initiates further interdisciplinary discussions.
